Description
The semantic of the edit is quite questionable since I'm allowed to modify my comment yet: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• the comment time is modified thus changing/breaking the discussion thread;• the previous version of the comment is removed/lost;• the button says "Comment";

the time is modified you are right, but that was thought to not make people change their previous pretend to have said something they haven't .

I did not completely understand the answer. If the time time is changed and this breaks the discussion thread then we need a solution.

My proposal is as follows:

- mark the comment as "edited" and keep the time of the first comment;
 - change the button from "Comment" to "Edit" / "Confirm" / "Save";
- PS: In an ideal world, by clicking on the "edited" mark one should have access to the history of changes on the specific comment;
